Finding the Optimal Pricing Structure for a Flagship Security Product

CHALLENGE

The product management team for a leading enterprise SaaS organization was looking to revamp the price structure of its flagship security product. It hoped to make changes that would make it competitively priced and optimized for new customers, while not turning off existing customers.

THE GLG APPROACH

GLG conducted a blinded conjoint survey fielded to an expert panel of 300 U.S.-based IT executives employed at organizations with more than 2,500 employees. The panel was made up of decision-makers and influencers responsible for evaluating and implementing network access control products and solutions.

OUTCOME

The GLG Surveys team identified key feature optimizations between product tiers and customer pricing sensitivities.

The client found that its initial pricing model was relatively close to its respondents' willingness to pay. At the end of the study, they adjusted their Tier 1 and Tier 2 pricing higher and adjusted their Tier 3 pricing lower.
