Development Trends of Global Organic Chemicals Market

Global Voice of Customer Survey to Inform Client on Portfolio Expansion

CHALLENGE

The client, a large-scale Japanese industrial conglomerate, commissioned GLG to survey the organic materials segment to better understand the needs of global B2B customers. The study aimed to understand product development trends that involve organic chemicals — including plastics, resins, composites, and hybrids — and their role in relevant end-use industries.

THE GLG APPROACH

The client needed a thorough analysis to assess the potential impact of its product portfolio expansion efforts globally. GLG launched an online B2B customer survey to understand customer issues and unmet needs. Around 200 global executives from different industry segments participated in the study.

In less than four weeks, an agile team of industry experts — part of GLG’s extensive network of approximately 1 million Network Members — executed the research and compiled the data into a detailed report.

OUTCOME

The result was a detailed 90-page executive-level report presenting the B2B customer survey findings with an outline of how organic chemicals are being integrated into the automotive supply chain and other relevant industries.
